Semiotic analysis of gender identity on television
Sorayya Ahmadi1, Seyyed Vahid Aqili2, Seyyed Mohammad Mahdizadeh3

Abstract
The main objective of this study was to analyze television series with an emphasis on gender identity to decode the main elements of representation mechanisms. Television, as the most popular medium, plays a significant role in representing and sharing attitudes. Therefore, TV series has an important role in the representation of gender in a society. The current study aims to answer: What are the factors and components of the implications of gender identity? Poststructuralist approach to identity (postmodernism identity) and Representation theory of Stuart Hall are used as a theoretical framework for examining this issue. "Zamaneh" was analyzed using semiotic analysis codes of Fisk at three levels of reality, representation and ideology. Components such as individualism, materialism, independence of women, the power to make decisions and choices, interpersonal relationships, patterns, styles and consumption patterns covering professional are representations of women in the modern search for identity and the identity of the dominant component. Two forms of women's identity represented in this serial include: the traditional identity factors like caste, religion, gender identity and coherent contributions in creating a fictitious or modern identity. It seems that this serial presents a negative representation of the formation of modern identity.

Investigating female subject in discoursal atmosphere of Iran’s cinema (Discourse analysis of Leila, Two Women, and Separation of Nader from Simin)

Ahmad Bokharaei1, Fardin Alikhah2, Amin Nabatishoghl3*

Abstract
The role of media in today’s world is undeniable and no border can be imagined for information transfer. Among these, one controversial issue in the media is gender and women. This study examines female subjects in discourse atmosphere of Iran’s cinema. It probes their situations and the way of confrontation with them regarding common discourses in two traditional and modernist structures in Iranian community. This study selects cinema and picturesque symbols to know the way of women’s confrontation with the world they live in, regarding their discourse between reality and cinema among movies influenced by the society as the cultural contexts that influence it simultaneously. Based on Laclau and Mouffe (1985)’s ideas about society, policy, subjectivity, and power, this study analyzes typology of three movies including Leila (1996), Two Women (1998), Separation of Nader from Simin (2010). This analysis showed that women’s relations in the context of social hierarchy and common discourses in the society and family atmosphere is heterogeneous and disparate. However, a definite direction can’t be identified for the way of women’s reactions in the social contexts. This can be attributed to the suspension of the relationships in transitioning society of Iran.

A mythical and psychological critique of status of women in Banugoshasb-nameh

Reza Satari¹, Hossein Hasanpour Alashti², Marzyeh Haqiqi³*

Abstract
Banugoshasb-nameh is a national epic poem written in imitation of Ferdowsi's Shahnameh about Banugoshasb's life and courage, daughter of Rostam. The poem, the only epic in Persian literature is the central story of a heroic woman. Most researchers, who have studied this poem, have focused on the presence of Banugoshasb in the context of epic and her heroism. They sometimes related her achievements to the effects left by the period of Matriarchy and mythological warrior goddesses while showing less interest in the psychological background of the champion women's actions. This research addresses a study of mythological and psychological background and heroic deeds of Banugoshasb character in the epic poem Banugoshasb-nameh. The findings show that although signs of Matriarchy and feminist can be seen in this poem, this marks the dominance of patriarchal culture, and patriarchy replaces matriarchy. In the second part of this paper, the issue is analyzed from viewpoint of Jung’s analytical psychology. According to this view, heroic and masculine behavior of Banugoshasp cannot be considered as feminist, but it should be attributed to effects of archetype animus (masculine psyche in women) that has been institutionalized through Banugoshasp life among the top heroes of epic and influenced by their behavior.

Poetic themes in female poems in the constitutional era: a critical study

Ezzat Molla Ebrahimi¹, Mahmood Reza Tavakoli Mohammadi²*

Abstract
In the constitutional era, the Persian poetry knew new poetry implications in the side of the old content defined by the Persian literature in previous eras. This is why we call this era, the era of radical change in the old contents. Familiarity with the western literature, political and social developments in Iran, enlightenment, tyranny, internal and external colonialism are among the factors that play an active role in this regard. This, in turn, has affected the lives of women in Iran not limiting its impact to the political and social life. Therefore, Iranian women knew their place in Iranian society and tried to get involved in the Iranian society and the defense of the homeland. This article tried to study poetic divans for Iranian women poets and look for the content of poetry in this regard. Considerable attempts of Iranian women to defend their homeland, their awareness of their place in the real Iranian society and the change in women’s attitude towards men are among the most important issues, and their reflections in the poems women poets in the constitutional era have been analyzed.

Women’s rank in the Iron Age based on ethnoarchaeological studies in the West Central Zagros nomads

Ali Norallahy*, Hasan Talai, Bahman Firoozmandi

Abstract
Up to now, various graveyards from Iron Age in the west central Zagros have been examined and some burial goods specific to women have been found. However, researchers have only described the data obtained not dealing with the issue of women’s rank in this period. This is due to the fact that among the buried objects any inscription related to these graves has not been found. Moreover, women studies have recently been posed within archeological literature. Researchers have ascribed these graves to semi nomads; a style of living in the form of tribal living which still exists in this region. Therefore, it can be said that with regard to the geographical similarity and the same living style of these people with the tribes living in this region, and also continuation of the traditions in central Zagros, some of which have been shown in this paper such as the burial type, women’s rank during Iron Age has been dealt ethno-archeologically. In this paper, woman’s burial in 14 graveyards, taking into account that women ranking in these tribes are seen in the family form which is affected by numerous social, political, and economic factors, has been studied. Finally, a conclusion will be presented.

Exogamy contexts in ancient Iran based on Shahnameh

Hasan Afrasiabi1*, Nasrin Bahmani2

Abstract
Marriage and mate selection is one of the most important events in the social life which has been observed in various forms in different eras and societies. To achieve this, using qualitative content analysis, all marriages mentioned in the Shahnameh were analyzed. The results show that the kings and heroes as the class of Iranian society in the Shahnameh, for finding a matching partner, personal gain or for political expedience outside Iran have attempted to select mate. In general, it can be said that in ancient exogamy marriage is not only a common pattern, but it can be a time-honored tradition that goes back a thousand years.
